

URBAN IMAGE BOMB

Have you ever considered the possibility of graffiti without vandalism?

Architectural light graffiti, or projection bombing, falls somewhere curiously in between graffiti art and public performance.

A legal form of street art that is an eco-friendly, leave-no-trace form of urban expression. The set up is simple: an image sequence (created ahead of time) is fed through a high-powered digital projector and trained onto a building or other suitable piece of architecture.

Outdoor digital projection in urban environments is a great method for getting your content up big before the eyes and in the minds of your fellow city inhabitants. It can illuminate little used urban spaces and highlight celebrations or cultural festivities. An excellent way to promote events or screen public works of art.

Projections can be tailored to your bespoke needs and respond to specific urban environments.
